Hi all,

I wanted to share this wonderful news from ABEC grad CICI Wood. She has landed a fabulous job and wants to give back.

Hello Dr. Margulis,

I hope you made it through another year of virtual teaching unscathed and are enjoying the summer! It was great to see you and the ANAW folks at last month's webinar.

I am emailing with both a life update and a related question. I just accepted a position at The Nature Conservancy working within the office of the CEO at their global headquarters. While I am incredibly excited for the opportunity, I was struck by how much my experiences traveling through ABEC put me at a distinct advantage. I have my time with ANAW on my resume, as well as my role in Project Tiger. This actually sparked a conversation with the chief of staff about Mama Simba (!!!) which I feel gave me a huge leg up in the hiring process. As a whole, I recognize the ways these have experiences have been integral in shaping me both personally and professionally.

I also recognize the way my own racial and financial privilege allowed me to take advantage of these experiences more than many of my peers. My new role comes with a hefty salary - more than I ever anticipated making with an ABEC degree - and I want to give back. I know ABEC has a few need-based scholarships for trips and I am wondering if it would be possible for me to contribute financially to creating a similar scholarship, or adding to the existing scholarships in order to help more ABECs. In an ideal world, I'd love to contribute at least $1000 a year for a scholarship (or maybe 2 $500 scholarships?) going to a student/students from backgrounds underrepresented in the conservation field (BIPOC,LGBTQIA+, etc.). I anticipate this amount growing as I progress professionally. If this is a possibility, I would love to find out how to go about making this happen.

Thanks!
CiCi Wood
